Pills and Starships takes place in a post-apocalyptic future (i.e., mankind has reached the "tipping point" of global warming) too complicated to explain here, except to say that corporations and celebrities function essentially the same way they do in our current world: they attempt to merge greed and conscientiousness, but when the two become incompatible, greed wins. At the center of Millet's novel is a family of four—Mom, Dad, fourteen-year-old Sam, and sixteen-year-old Nat (who ...
