The Fourth Way is an approach to self-development developed by George Gurdjieff over years of travel in the East (c. 1890 – 1912). It combines and harmonizes what he saw as three established traditional "ways" or "schools": those of the emotions, the body, and the mind, or of monks , fakirs , and yogis , respectively.

Philosopher's Way, San Francisco is a 2.7-mile loop trail around the perimeter of John McLaren Park created by artists Peter Richards and Susan Schwartzberg, staff artists at the Exploratorium. The trail, dedicated on January 5, 2013, is the first and only path built for philosophers in the United States and features fourteen stone markers by mason George Gonzalez intended as "musing stations" to stimulate contemplation. The US$146,000 trail was funded as a public art set-aside by the San Fran

The Philosophers Walk in Heidelberg, or the Philosophenweg, is a path located on the northern banks of the Neckar River in Heidelberg, Germany. Historically, this was just a simple rough path through the vineyards; however, it would later be renamed Philosophenweg during the Romantic Period because of the many professors and philosophers of Heidelberg who enjoyed the path for its solitude, natural beauty, and great views of the town.

Chapter 4 - The Gloomy Presentiments of Parson Malthus and David Ricardo. Introduction. Adam Smith's vision of the world demonstrated glowing optimism when he founded the school of Classical Economists. Ironically, the chief spokesmen for that school — David Ricardo and Thomas Malthus — while accepting the principles which Smith laid down, differed sharply from him in their pessimistic views of an ominous future.
